

Treat School Property as you would your own to become a Responsible Leader.

School is a great place to see our friends. We can sit together at lunch and play at recess. If we show our friends that we respect school property, they too will learn to respect school property. If a friend is being reckless with school materials, we should show them how to be more careful. If our friends are being too rough with the playground equipment, we should ask them to be more gentle. We all enjoy school more when things are kept neat and in good shape.

All students share responsibility for school property. What we use one year will be used by a different class and a different group of children the next year. We must handle books and supplies gently, and be careful with the desks and chairs in the classroom. We should use the sports equipment with care, and be cautious with the musical instruments. When we handle school property with respect, everything stays in good shape for the next year.

When we are at school, we must show respect for the school property. We must follow the rules to walk quietly in the hallways, keep the classrooms neat, and treat the desks and chairs as we do our own furniture. The school supplies must not be wasted, ruined, or lost. The books should be handled gently and put back where they belong. If we are all careful with school property, the school will always be a great place to learn and have fun.
